

Our Approach:

From the very first phone call, our team is with your family every step of the way, from assessment to treatment to healing.

With the Douglas S. Feldman Suicide Prevention Project, the Guidance Center addresses high-risk cases with a thorough evaluation for suicide risk; multiple sessions of individual, group and family therapy each week; and an individualized, culturally sensitive treatment plan that focuses on safety strategies, healthy coping skills and relapse prevention.

Evaluation with a psychiatrist regarding the possible use of medication will also be provided, when needed.

We also provide in-home treatment and referrals to programs and services that will support your efforts to protect your child.

Unlike many providers, the Guidance Center promises that at-risk children and teens will be seen within 24-48 hours, when the case is deemed urgent.

Important Note: For emergencies, call 988 or go to your nearest hospital.

GUIDANCE CENTER

The Problem:

Children and teens are under more stress than ever, with suicidal thinking and suicide attempts on the rise – plus, the isolation and fear surrounding the pandemic has created a dramatic increase in severe depression and anxiety.

When a situation is urgent, parents don't know where to turn for timely, compassionate and professional help. With the Douglas S. Feldman Suicide Prevention Project, the Guidance Center provides a family-centered solution to bring hope and healing.

The Statistics:

- Suicide is the second leading cause of death for ages 10-24.
- More teenagers and young adults die from suicide than from cancer, heart disease, AIDS, birth defects and other diseases combined.
- Each day there are an average of 3,069 suicide attempts by young people in grades 9-12.
- Nearly one in five college students consider suicide.
- Four out of five teens who attempt suicide have given clear warning signs.

Warning signs that your child or teen may be at risk of suicide:

- Withdrawing from friends and family
- Doing risky or self-destructive things
- Sleeping more or less than usual
- Changes in eating patterns
- Increased use of drugs or alcohol
- Being depressed and crying often
- Giving away possessions
