The Problem:

During adolescence, the brain goes through many changes. In fact, the brain is not fully developed until a person is in their mid-20s.

This means that alcohol and drugs can damage a teen's brain in the long term, potentially causing learning difficulties and health problems into adulthood.

The Statistics:

- ▶ By 12th grade, about two-thirds of students have tried alcohol, and more than one-third have done so by 8th grade.
- ▶ About half of high school students report they've tried marijuana.
- ▶ Among high school seniors, nearly 2 in 10 say they've used prescription medicine without a prescription.
- ▶ People from 12 to 20 years of age account for 11% of all alcohol consumed in the United States.
- ▶ Since 1999 the rate of overdose deaths including prescription pain relievers, heroin and synthetic opioids such as fentanyl nearly quadrupled.

Some signs that your teen may be using alcohol or drugs:

- ▶ Changes in friends
- ▶ Mood swings
- ▶ Becoming verbally or physically abusive
- ▶ Lying and/or stealing
- ▶ Making excuses
- ▶ Breaking curfew
- ▶ Sleepless nights
- ▶ Staying in their room

Common reasons teens use alcohol or drugs include:

- ▶ Curiosity
- ▶ Peer pressure
- ▶ Stress
- ▶ Emotional struggles/mental health disorders
- ▶ A desire to escape
